Alexis Romani, the protagonist, and his American-born wife, Serena are spending a few months in Israel. They normally live in Milan, Italy, where Alexis, in his mid-thirties, holds an important position in a multinational company. He is going through a nervous collapse. The story is told in the first person, Alexis being the narrator. The young man's complex background catches up with him and appears to be at the root of his existential malaise. He was brought up a Catholic, while his father was an Italian Jew and his mother, a beautiful mulatto woman. He spent most of his youth in Central Africa and his early adult years in Italy. Having worked 10 years for KBI Italia, he comes to the conclusion that something is wrong with a business which deals with corrupt governments. And, of course, he has to blame himself for his involvement in the firm. On the other hand he is the founder of a cultural magazine focusing on the Third World. Against this background, it is his marriage which is at stake. But that, he isn't aware of. Instead, he relives his past in Africa with his mother, his experiences as a world traveler for KBI Italia - He will probably come out of this maze, after several suicide attempts, but at the cost of a divorce. The tone of the story is in turn hallucinatory and partly lucid, depending on whether it deals with the present in Israel, where suicide bombings have become a regular occurrence, or flashbacks of the past. His nervous breakdown reaches bottom and he questions his triple identity: African, Jewish-Italian and Catholic, asking himself what his true allegiance should be. But he's too muddled to find any answer. His kind lodger in Ashkelon, a resort town near the Gaza border, takes pity on him and suggests that the couple consult a psychiatrist friend of her nephew's. But the experience proves inconclusive. At a party given by Israeli acquaintances, the couple comes across Serena's former American lover, and Peter, a kindly German professor. This only disturbs Alexis even further. Two days after that social gathering, Alexis phones Peter, on impulse, and asks him whether they could meet in Tel Aviv - without Serena -, where the German visitor is currently staying. The two men will spend a day together, visiting the city, which Peter knows quite well. To crown this friendly tour, Peter takes his new companion to the Shalom Tower for a breathtaking view of the city and the Mediterranean. There, Alexis will attempt suicide, but as he is about to throw himself in the void, his pants get hooked on the guardrail. He barely escaped death, but this situation disconcerts Peter, who, of course, knew nothing of the young Italian's malaise. He takes him back to his hotel and wants to call Serena in Ashkelon to come and fetch her husband. But Alexis begs him not to divulge what has just happened and promises that he won't subject him to anything foolish. He opens up to the German professor and asks him if he could spend the night at the hotel, giving Serena an excuse. Peter agrees, a little reluctantly. But the hotel is full and the two men will have to share the same room. To Peter's surprise and chagrin, the young man falls in love with him. And they will make love. It is both Alexis' first homosexual experience and a revelation to the young Italian. Aware of the young man's very disturbed state of mind, Peter suggests that he go to a psychiatric clinic in Belgium where a dear friend of Peter's has been cured. It so happens that Alexis' father resides part of the year in Europe's capital, when he is not attending to his construction business in Africa. The following winter we find Alexis in a mansion-like clinic in the outskirts of Brussels. He will spend several months there, under the surveillance of a team of psychoanalysts and nurses. His father pays him a visit, and he is accompanied by

Serena, who made the trip from Milan. To the young man's dismay, he learns from his father's mouth - not his wife's - that Sere

Place-Keeping presents the latest research and practice on place-keeping – that is, the long-term management of public and private open spaces – from around Europe and the rest of the world. There has long been a focus in urban landscape planning and urban design on the creation of high-quality public spaces, or place-making. This is supported by a growing body of research which shows how high-quality public spaces are economically and socially beneficial for local communities and contribute positively to residents’ quality of life and wellbeing. However, while large amounts of capital are spent on the creation of open spaces, little thought is given to, and insufficient resources made available for, the long-term maintenance and management of public spaces, or place-keeping. Without place-keeping, public spaces can fall into a downward spiral of disrepair where anti-social behaviour can emerge and residents may feel unsafe and choose to use other spaces. The economic and social costs of restoring such spaces can therefore be considerable where place-keeping does not occur. Place-Keeping also provides an accessible presentation of the outputs of a major European Union-funded project MP4: Making Places Profitable, Public and Private Open Spaces which further extends the knowledge and debate on long-term management of public and private spaces. It will be an invaluable resource for students, academics and practitioners seeking critical but practical guidance on the long-term management of public and private spaces in a range of contexts.

Climbing frames, arches, igloos, tumbling bars, jumping stones, and climbing walls all found their way into unsightly wastelands and boring squares thanks to the visionary help of architect Aldo van Eyck, who transformed urban spaces in Amsterdam into more than 700 playgrounds between 1947 and 1978. Beyond the sites' spatial designs, van Eyck also developed a whole series of sandpits, climbing frames, and other equipment in his radical, charming recreation of the city into a space for play. This book considers the importance of the playground in general and more specifically within the international postwar developments in city planning. Van Eyck's sources of inspiration, from Kurt Schwitters to Jacoba Mulder, are surveyed. The playgrounds themselves are examined on the basis of how they were received at the time of construction, through letters from neighborhood residents, memoranda by public officials, and the reactions of contemporary architects. A separate essay traces what happened to the playgrounds after 1978, and how van Eyck's ideas resonate in the design practices and spatial planning policy of today.

This paper examines some of the factors that have been influential in keeping inflation low in the United States during 1995–98, despite strong growth and high levels of employment. Our results identify three important variables: declines in import prices, a slowdown in the growth of nonwage labor compensation, and a decline in labor costs. We also reassess the role of labor costs and import prices in determining price inflation.

From the street corners of the North End of Boston to the Basque regions of Spain, renowned sociologist William Foote Whyte has been a pioneer in developing methods and theories that have changed and expanded the way that we look at social structures and the individuals within them. Now, Whyte passes on his experience and knowledge with a look at problems he encountered in the field, and how he was able to overcome them. This book is both a guide through the practical and conceptual complexities and problems associated with fieldwork, as well as a look back on the life of one of the most interesting and important sociologists of our time.

Technological advances have been responsible for many developments in the field of healthcare in recent years. One of the areas opened up by new technological possibilities is that of cybertherapy and telemedicine, which involves the use of computer and communications technology to provide improved health services that are sometimes qualitatively different from those provided in traditional in-person therapeutic experiences. This book, the Annual Review of Cybertherapy and Telemedicine (ARCTT), covers a wide variety of topics of interest to the mental health, neuroscience and rehabilitation communities, presented in a carefully structured sequence. The book is divided into seven main parts. Following an editorial, the section entitled White Paper discusses critical issues for the future of the field. This is followed by sections containing critical reviews, evaluation studies, original research and clinical observations. Work in Progress, the last section, includes papers describing future research work. The book will be of interest to both health professionals and patients, and to anyone else interested in the continued improvement of healthcare systems.

A masterful collection about intimacy, loneliness, and time, each inspired by different works of art, spanning the entirety of the great Italian writer's career. In Stories with Pictures, Antonio Tabucchi responds to photographs, drawings, and paintings from his dual homelands of Italy and Portugal, among other European countries. The stories in this collection spring forth from the shadows of Tabucchi's imagination, as he steps into worlds just hidden from view. From inscrutable masks of pre-Columbian gods, stamps of bright parrots and postcards of yellow cities, portraits of devilish Portuguese nuns, the way to these remote landscapes appear like a "train emerging from a thick curtain of heat." As we peer through the curtain, what we find on the other side rings distinctly human, a world charged with melancholic longing for time gone by. "Sight, hearing, voice, word" Tabucchi writes, "this flow isn't in one direction, the current is back and forth." Reading these stories, one feels the pendulum current, and the desire in this remarkable author to hold the real in the surreal.

This book provides a clear, systematic and up-to-date picture of the vast and dynamic industry of lobbying and Public Affairs in Europe, not only at EU level, but specifically in each of the 28 EU Member States. Using contributions from political scientists and lobbyists from each country, the volume offers a comprehensive review of the European lobbying industry, tackling elements such as the institutional framework and the political culture of each country, the perception of lobbyists by public opinion and politicians, the professionalization and the numbers of the industry in each country, the regulation of the sector (through dedicated laws, self-imposed ethical codes, etc.). This is a benchmark publication for all those studying or working in the field of Lobbying, Public Affairs, Communication and Business and Politics in or with EU countries.

""There is nothing in England that exercises a more delightful spell over my imagination than the lingerings of the holiday customs and rural games of former times."" So begins Irving's classic recital of Christmas traditions in 19th-century England. Originally part of The Sketch Books of Geoffrey Crayon, Gent., which also included Irving's most famous stories, Rip Van Winkle and The Legend of Sleepy Hollow, Old Christmas depicts Irving's Christmas Eve trip by stagecoach to Yorkshire and the delightful holiday games and rituals he shared with his hosts at their home, Bracebridge Hall. Famed illustrator Randolph Caldecott's sketches provide a perfect complement to Irving's descriptions of holiday cheer.
